Ags 'must win' another

This Saturday finds the Aggie football team with much more than just homecoming at stake in its contest with Fullerton State. USU needs this game to keep alive hopes of winning a second straight PCAA championship.

In the past three weeks the Ags have seen an impressive 3-1-1 record drop to 4-3-1 following two one-sided losses to national powers BYU and Arizona State. The single win in the past three weeks was not impressive, edging a Pacific squad 15-14. Pacific is 0-3 in the conference and were sent packing last week in its 33-10 loss to Fresno State, a team that is not exactly frightening people either with an accumulative record of 3-5.

It should be noted that the Pacific Tigers were on a hot streak before playing the Aggies. The Tigers had won two straight games and had been exhibiting an improved defense that was evidence for three games before disappearing last week. However, if improvement is a key to beating the Ags the Fullerton State team might point to its humiliation of Cal State-Northridge in last week's 49-3 contest.

At this point the Ags are 2-0-1 in conference action tied in PCAA play with the San Jose State Spartans, a team that boasts a league record of 3-0-1. The Spartans will probably finish the conference season undefeated with only Pacific left to play in league play. That puts a lot of pressure on USU to win its season finale with Fresno State and this coming contest with Fullerton State.

For this coming game the Aggies are still hurting from a rash of injuries that might stand in the way of a homecoming win more than the Fullerton offensive line, which is reputed to be one of the best in the PCAA.

USU Coach Bruce Snyder will be calling upon his team's character to keep the Ags in the PCAA race. The Ags are beat up and worn out after facing BYU, Pacific and Arizona State in successive weeks and could use the team's bye a week earlier.

After homecoming, the Ags do get a bye before facing Weber State and Fresno State to close out the season.

Snyder contends that his team is healthier for this contest and is optimistic about winning.

Blake brothers show family golf prowess

Utah State University golfers Don Blake and his brother Blake combined for a strong 63 Sunday to finish first in the best-ball portion of the 1979 Four Seasons Open, in St. George.

The Blake brothers finished stroke ahead of Rod McArthur and St. George City Manager Esplin. McArthur and Esplin in at 64.

Blake has remained consistent this year, winning a number of tournaments, including the Wolfpack Classic in Lake Tahoe, the Bengal Classic in Pocatello and the Ev Thorpe Classic in Logan.

Blake along with Aggie's Banes and Jess Moreno have led the high-placing team this year. The remainder of the squad include Kevin O'Connell, Craig Sarlo and Jerry Eddy.

The Aggie's last performance was in Ogden participating in the Weber State Invitational, according to Coach Dan Roskelley. Ags are doing well despite a place finish.

"We did pretty good. We placed pretty good. We placed third, but only five strokes out of first place," said Roskelley.

Since participating in Ogden the golf team has enjoyed a small vacation, they will next play in Las Vegas Nov. 28-Dec. 2.
